Description

William Edwy Vine (1873-1949) is well known as the author of Vine's Expository Dictionary. His scholarly training is evident in this commentary on the book of Hebrews, which is both concise and thorough. He begins each chapter with an analysis that serves as a good outline for the reader to follow. He goes back to the original Greek to clarify key points that are not apparent in the English. Modern readers will profit from his exposition of Hebrews, which shows the superiority of Christ and warns Jewish believers of the dangers of going back to Judaism. This work was first printed in 1952 and reprinted in 1957. It is being reprinted by Believers Bookshelf because of the rich ministry it contains intended to draw our hearts closer to our Lord Jesus Christ.
