Description

Have you ever thought about serving Christ Jesus abroad while continuing your secular employment? What about helping someone take this route, while you stay home? Why is it that tentmakers get into countries otherwise closed to the gospel? What are the advantages and disadvantages to tentmaking?

In this lucid presentation the author assembles a compelling case for Christians to consider a tentmaking lifestyle as "a unique, practical and effective way to transmit the gospel to 'all nations' and establish believers in assemblies."

Philip Nunn works in London, England and has, with his wife, a growing interest in world mission. He spent his early years in Colombia, South America where his parents are missionaries.

From the Foreword

"I am glad Philip Nunn has written this booklet. I have been advocating the concept of tentmaking for many years and encouraging it in my own children."
